Red Casualties
Said to Number

Nazis Push To Within
125 Miles of Black
Sea and Kiev.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
The destruction of two Russian armies of the Ukraine—the sixth and 12th—and part of another, the 18th, was claimed late last night by the German high command in a special communiqué.

Taken captive, it was added, were 103,000 men. Russian casualties were declared to number more than 200,000. A total of 25 Red divisions were reported smashed.

These spectacular successes were claimed in what has now become the supreme Nazi offensive effort toward the Russian Black Sea port of Odessa—a thrust which Berlin asserted yesterday had reached an area 125 miles south of Kiev and about an equal distance from the Black sea.

Leaders Captured.

In this one area, the Germans said officially, the commander of the sixth Soviet army, "other high troop leaders" and 30,000 Red soldiers were captured in the annihilation of a big Russian assault force encircled below the town of Uman—which is 75 miles south of Bel Tserkov, where heavy fighting previously had been reported.

Exactly where the bulk of the Russians declared destroyed had been operating was not stated by the Nazis.

In its communiques for yesterday and again early this morning, the Soviet command made no mention of Uman nor of action anywhere in that area.

Both Soviet bulletins mentioned fighting only in the familiar areas, thus implying that there had been no substantial change in the Red lines.

Theaters of Action.

This morning the theaters of action were given as along the Estonian front; about Kaisalni, which is 75 miles above Leningrad on the Karelian isthmus; Smolensk, at the Russian center before Moscow; Korosten and Bel Tserkov, the one 80 miles northwest of Kiev and the other 50 miles south of that Ukrainian capital.

The German version of the situation in the north was that the town of Rakvere (Wesenberg), 60 miles east of the Estonian capital of Tallinn and on the railroad to Leningrad, had been captured and that German forces had pushed on to the western shores of the Gulf of Finland.

The situation as to Kiev, which had been the earlier objective of parallel eastward German drives, was somewhat obscure. Berlin again claimed that it was encircled; Moscow said that it had been turned into a "real fortress of defense."

Guerrilla War Urged.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, Russian commander of the western front, and Vice Premier Nikolai Bulganin, a member of the Soviet military council, appealed to Russians everywhere to heighten their guerrilla warfare.

"Help the Red army rout the Hitler dogs! The hour of victory is near," these letters said.

Late last night, after hours of silence on the point, Moscow announced that Red warplanes loosed high explosives and fire bombs on the Berlin area Thursday night, thus taking the credit for a raid which British sources all during yesterday had attributed to the Soviets.

Early this morning the Exchange Telegraph reported from Moscow that Soviet planes bombed military objectives in the vicinity of Berlin last night for the second straight night.

Forecast Promises Rain Next Week, Clouds Today

It's the People!... I Am Nothing
--Expression Mirrors Churchill

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.
LONDON, Aug. 8.—(By Wireless)—At luncheon time in the Ritz, Dorchester and Savoy hotels can be found Britons who are judicial and critical. They say Prime Minister Winston Churchill has bad advisers. They say he surrounds himself with personal friends. They complain that he has put a trade unionist in charge of labor who doesn't push the workers hard enough. They say he has failed in some branches of service.

When you ask mildly, "Why don't you get somebody else?" they look horrified. They say, "We didn't mean that, of course. He is indispensable. Nobody could take Winston's place. But still one must admit—" And they are at it again.

It is often very hard to remem-

Two-Way Probe Supplies Flow Of State Prisons Through Suez Will Be Held Despite Axis

Action Is Outgrowth of Alleged Lashing at Sparta Camp.

By LUKE GREENE.

A two-way investigation of Georgia prison camps appeared certain yesterday as the outgrowth of accusations that a Negro convict at the Sparta camp had been lashed to death July 29 with a hose pipe administered by a convict boss.

Although Clem E. Rainey, chairman of the Georgia Prison and Parole Commission, would say nothing except that a normal investigation was proceeding "to determine the true facts and circumstances," Vivian L. Stanley, another member of the commission, said the board would go to Sparta early next week to take further evidence from prisoners and others who might be familiar with conditions there.

At the same time it was reported that the canal had been blocked on numerous occasions by wrecked ships, causing serious delays.

Thousands of Anzac troops, they said, were being landed at Suez and Aden.

Red Successes Forced Nazis To Alter Plans

New Time Table Calls for Moscow's Fall in September.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

BERN, Switzerland, Aug. 8. Information reaching Bern from foreign military quarters in Berlin indicated tonight that the German high command was forced to revamp its Russian campaign to a long-term basis July 15 when it became evident that blitzkrieg plans would fail.

This information was that Germany originally had planned to occupy the Ukraine and take Leningrad within three weeks, then seize Moscow and reach Astrakhan, on the Caspian sea 1,700 miles east of Berlin, by the end of August.

The new time table calls for the capture of Leningrad and Moscow and an advance to the Caucasus by the end of September, the military sources said. If the Russian army is still in existence the Germans would pursue it toward the Ural mountains and then settle down on a defensive line.

Present Strategy.

The information gave this picture of the strategy:

In October Turkey would be asked for free passage of German troops for a campaign against British forces in the Middle East.

Japan would attack Russia in the Lake Baikal region of eastern Siberia if the United States intervened actively on the Soviet side.

During the winter the Luftwaffe would concentrate on destruction of Russian industrial centers between Moscow and the Urals. A stock of 5,000,000 fur coats to clothe German troops during the winter already has been collected.

To Offer Peace.

If the Russians collapsed or when the Germans succeeded in establishing a strong defensive line, Germany would make a peace offer to Britain and the United States. Should peace be rejected and the Near East offensive fail, Germany might attempt an invasion of Britain.

They told a graphic story of constant bombings, of laying of mines by Axis planes in the narrow 103-mile long canal and of British efforts to remove the blasted wreckage of ships that blocked the lifeline.

Giants cranes, they said, operated along the canal to remove wreckage. Some of the machines were described as American-made and capable of clearing the wreckage in two days.

They said that the canal had been blocked on numerous occasions by wrecked ships, causing serious delays.

Rail Rate Parity Urged To Cut Defense Costs

U. S. Directs Sharp Thrusts At Nazi, Nippon Governments

Japanese To Blame for Self-Proclaimed 'Encirclement'; Germans Covetous of Western World, Hull Says in Answer to Axis Attacks.

McDonald Points Out Move Would Save 'Millions.'

By The United Press.

Walter McDonald, executive secretary of the Southern Governors' Conference, last night pointed out that the federal government could cut "millions of dollars" off the defense bill by instituting the equalization of freight rates which the south has been seeking for years.

McDonald, also chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission and president of the Southern Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners, said that bombers made in Tulsa were costing $375 each more than they would if the south and west enjoyed the same freight rates as does the official territory—the section north of the Ohio river and east of the Mississippi.

He said there were no statistics available for an exact estimate of the amount the south's high freight bills would add to Uncle Sam's defense expenditures, to that it undoubtedly would run into "millions of dollars" annually.

The commissioner and other experts representing the southern governors in the fight for lower freight rates in the south calculated southern shippers were handicapped to the extent of nearly $160,000,000 by the high costs of railroad transportation in this section in 1939.

Duration Draft Bill in Danger Of House Defeat

Cox Asks for Indefinite Service 'as War Is Inescapable.'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(P)—Administration leaders in the house expressed apprehension today that the bill to retain the rank and file of the Army in service for an indefinite period was in danger of defeat or drastic revision.

The leaders, who declined to be quoted by name, glumly disclosed that they had counted noses and found that a score or more of Democratic members would not commit themselves. This group apparently was in a position to settle the issue.

Despite this attitude, there was for the time being, at least, no talk of compromise. The senate, which passed service extension legislation yesterday, achieved a high measure of unity behind the bill by imposing an 18-month limitation upon the added services of the Army men. But in the house, the leaders spoke only of fighting it out—win or lose—on the straight cut issue of an indefinite extension.

Representative Cox, Democrat, Georgia, called for indefinite extension "because war is inescapable."

"The public has given overwhelming support to the President in what he has done and if this means war, there is little reason to complain," the Georgian said.

Speaking deliberately, Cox said he always had thought that war could not be avoided and noted that some persons maintained the selective service act, British aid program, establishment of offshore naval bases, and occupation of Iceland were actual acts of war.

Each of these moves, he continued, brought the United States "closer and closer to war."

"Let us present a united front," Cox said. "Let us say to the world that we are Americans and that we mean business."

Can't Tolerate Ship Stoppage, Official Says

U. S. Eyes New Dispute Threatening Plane Plant Output.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

A flat warning came from the Navy Department yesterday that the government would take direct action to get production resumed at the great Kearny, N. J., yards of the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Company if the management and a striking CIO union could not settle their dispute.

Saying that 200,000 man-hours of work on "vitally needed combatant ships for the Navy" were being lost daily, Ralph Bard, acting secretary of the Navy in the absence of Frank B. Knox, expressed hope in a statement that the strike could be settled at once.

"But if management and labor cannot arrive at a settlement," he continued, "steps must be taken which will in one way or another put this huge shipbuilding plant back into production at the earliest possible moment."

Asks Quick Action.

A proposal that the government take over the yards came from Peter Flynn, vice president of a CIO shipbuilding workers' local, who said in a statement at Jersey City, N. J., that action should be taken "without another hour's delay."

If the government does take over the yards, Flynn said, "the picket line will instantly become a marching line of American workers rushing back to pick up where they left off one of the most vital jobs in the national defense program."

Flynn said the statement was issued "merely as a statement of policy so that the general public may know the union's attitude," and that he had not been in communication with any official government agency.

Plans of New Jersey draft boards to reclassify the strikers as available for immediate military service were halted yesterday in an order telegraphed to state selective service headquarters at Trenton by Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service.

Action Requested.

The local announced simultaneously it had urged Hershey to telegraph to repudiate the proposed action of local draft boards in reclassifying the strikers, adding that the "action is a barefaced attempt to use selective service as a strike-breaking weapon and if carried through will deprive Kearny, shipyards of essential defense workers."

The Kearny Yard has approximately 18,000 employees. Two cruisers, six destroyers, three

Navy Ousts Fliers For Decapitation

PENSACOLA, Fla., Aug. 8.—(P)—Two ensigns court-martialed at the Naval Air Station here May 20 after their low-flying plane had decapitated a woman working in an Alabama turnip field were dismissed from the service and sent to prison today after conviction on involuntary manslaughter charges.

The ensigns were Joseph C. Thompson of Headingsburg, Cal., and Paul C. Brown of Chicago.

Brown, pilot of the plane which decapitated Mrs. Robert Phillips, of Robertsdale, Ala., on March 25, was sentenced to 24 months and Thompson, his passenger, sentenced to 12 months.

They were dismissed shortly after noon and under marine guard started for the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

Governor Is Absolute Dictator Over Colleges, Dixon Declares

Says Schools Belong to Executive—Not to People.

(Complete text of Mr. Dixon's speech will be carried in The Constitution tomorrow.)

By LUKE GREENE.

Georgia's colleges no longer belong to the people, but to the Governor, J. Curtis Dixon, ousted vice chancellor of the University System of Georgia, declared yesterday in an address to the Atlanta Lions Club.

"With the power he now has he can close one of them at the end of the month," he asserted. "He will say it is better for him to control them than for 'foreigners' and foundations to control them."

Calhoun Farm Rally Hears State Leaders

County Picnic Addressed By Senator Russell, Stiles Martin.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
CALHOUN, Ga., Aug. 8.—Standing within hand-reach of an REA line, Senator Russell, speaking today at a county picnic sponsored jointly by the Gordon County Farm Bureau and the Calhoun Times, predicted that the time would soon come when practically every farm home in Georgia would have electricity.

He further predicted that within a few years lines would be run to farmers' homes without cost to the farmer, and that all he would have to pay for would be the electricity, without any guarantee of so many customers to the mile. Neither would he have to pay for the construction of the lines, poles, etc., the speaker said.

He compared the service with rural free delivery, saying the government takes the bill to the farmer's door without cost to him beyond postage, and predicted the same thing for electricity.

Aids Farm Federation.

The meeting, held at Dew's Lake, seven miles east of Calhoun, a famous fishing and picnic ground, was primarily to boost interest in the local farm bureau federation. A county picnic had in years before been sponsored by the Times, so this year the joint meeting was arranged.

Tom Malone, president of the Gordon County Bureau, presided, and speakers at the forenoon session included Ronald Chance, Calhoun attorney, who reviewed the history of farm organizations; County Agent James C. Edwards spoke on "Co-operation Between Farm Bureau and the Soil Improvement Association"; Isaac Moore, of the Hamilton County Farm Bureau, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Open forum talks were made by Mell Hammond, of Plainsville, and Dr. M. A. Acree, Sonoraville doctor-farmer. Dr. Acree said that the first purpose of the farmer was not to make money, but to produce food which in turn produced healthy people.

Stiles Martin Speaks.

At noon a picnic dinner was served and the speaker of the afternoon program was Stiles A. Martin, state news editor of The Atlanta Constitution, who brought greetings from that paper, pointing out that The Constitution was founded at a time when Georgia's cities had been reduced to ashes by Sherman and that The Constitution was printed in the interest of the farmer at that time and had always had their interests at heart.

He said this was the policy of the late Clark Howell, who always insisted on the weather report being printed on the front page, and said that same policy was being carried out by the son, Clark Howell Jr., who insisted that much farm news be printed.

Martin stated the greatest farm problem facing the south is "poor" land, pointing out that the average yield of corn per acre in Georgia is ten bushels, compared with fifty bushels in Indiana.

"Also," said Martin, "it is lots easier to cultivate rich land than poor land, and if our land was more productive we could grow twice as much, with half the labor now takes."

Defense Stamp Plea.

Marion Allen, internal revenue collector, of Atlanta, made an appeal for the purchase of defense bonds and stamps, his appeal meeting with enthusiastic approval.

Senator Russell, the last speaker of the day, reviewed farm legislation in Washington during the last few years. In connection with the REA program, which he said was fathered by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, Senator Russell said that when the REA program was adopted by Congress, that Georgia stood forty-first in the number of farms having rural electricity and now Georgia stands fourth.

In connection with price-fixing, he said, the emergencies of the time might require some adjustments, but that he did not favor singling out the farmer and fixing the price of his products only,

It's the People! I Am Nothing, Churchill Says

and that he did not favor fixing the price of farm products, unless prices of some of the commodities he has to buy are also met.

In connection with the laws governing parity payment on farm products, the senator said the law now only affects one year, and predicted that the next time a parity payment bill is considered that if passed it will be made permanent and will not have to be changed or fought over every year.

He commended the local farm bureau organization and said the farmers could get more recognition in Washington if they had an official organization to represent them and one that could deal with other farmers' groups, saying one organization can get the help of other organizations, but if you have no organization there is no starting point, except such efforts as senators and congressmen make.

Senator Russell, in speaking of the international situation, said America is practically the only country left where free people could assemble, like the crowd here today, could say what they wish freely and could then print what was said without censorship by anyone.

He predicted that if the United States is drawn into the war, that the nation as a whole and single unit would "join hands to win the fight and continue to maintain the freedom we have so long enjoyed, and which shall continue to enjoy, even if we have to fight to maintain it."

Russell also said he was proud of the south's backing of the national defense program and said he pointed to his colleagues that if there had been as many volunteers from all the other states as there were from four states in the south, that no draft legislation would have been necessary.

Russell was introduced by Roy McGinty, editor of the Calhoun Times and president of the Georgia Press Association.

troops near Thailand, and this, he said, constituted "military preparations."

The official Japanese news agency supported the encirclement thesis by pointing out that British air bases had been established in Malaya and Burma and that Britain was planning to strengthen the defense of the Burma supply road to nationalist China in close co-operation with the Chungking government.

The agency asserted, too, that the British government was understood to have approached Thailand secretly for use of military bases there in return for a "consideration" regarding lost Thai territories now parts of British Malaya and Burma.

Berlin Answered.

The charge that Germany had aggressive intentions against the Western Hemisphere came as an answer to authorized sources in Berlin who asserted that Nazi agencies were preparing "another expose of Roosevelt secret power politics."

The German sources said they had material establishing that President Roosevelt was seeking domination of South America and was secretly "grasping for other bases" there.

Hull described this as a transient piece of propaganda which he said was not likely to deceive or even be seriously considered by any country in the Western Hemisphere.

Japs Clear Strip On Siberian Border

SHANGHAI, Aug. 8.—(UPI)—Japan has ordered all nationals not in military service to evacuate a wide area along the Siberian border in western Manchukuo, reliable sources said today as observers reported that Russo-Japanese relations might be nearer the breaking point than Japanese relations with Thailand.

The order, it was said, covers all Japanese civilians in an area from Manchukuo, on the western frontier with Siberia, to Tsinhai-har, 350 miles east of Manchukuo, where sporadic clashes have been reported recently between Japanese and Russian troops.

Situation in Vichy Indicates Germans Will Be Given Bases

Weygand Arrives From Algiers for 'Most Important' Talks Today; Vital Decisions Must Be Taken by Council of Ministers.

VICHY, Aug. 8.—(UP)—Germany may be given "port facilities and transport privileges" in certain parts of the French overseas empire, it was indicated tonight after the arrival in Vichy from Algiers of General Maxime Weygand for "most important" talks with the Petain government.

By the time Marshal Henri Philippe Petain's council of ministers convenes tomorrow evening a final arrangement extending the scope of France's troubled "collaboration" with Germany is expected to be ready as result of closely-guarded consultations under way tonight.

The council of ministers must take "momentous decisions" tomorrow involving widespread repercussions and the course of France's relations with both Germany and the United States. The Petain government is trying to fulfill Germany's collaboration demands and at the same time retain its ties with the United States and other parts of the world.

Ultimatum Rumored.

(The statement that vital decisions must be taken by Vichy Saturday appeared to lend some credence to recent reports that a German ultimatum has been served on the Petain government, expiring Sunday, and demanding surrender to the Nazis of bases in Dakar, Casablanca and Algiers.)

Weygand flew here by special plane from his African defense post simultaneous with the return to Vichy of Vice Premier Admiral Jean Francois Darlan from Paris, where he conferred with German authorities in the midst of mounting Nazi demands for closer French-German military as well as political ties.

Darlan remained overnight in Paris in order to talk with Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's personal envoy who returned to Paris only yesterday from Berlin, where he presumably received fresh instructions from the Reichsfuehrer.

Situation Is Tense.

Weygand reached Vichy in the midst of a tense situation which has brought Vichy's relations with both Germany and the United States to a crucial point.

Weygand's sudden airplane flight from Africa and his talks with Petain and Darlan are clearly connected with the Petain government's recent note to Washington and the United States' clear threat of a diplomatic break if strategic military-naval bases such as Dakar are surrendered to Germany.

So far as could be learned tonight there is no question of handing over any French Empire bases to the Axis but port facilities and transport privileges may be arranged "within the scope of collaboration," which Petain promised to Hitler in their Monteiro meeting last year.

No Promise Made.

Vichy's note to Washington, it disclosed, refrained from any promise that France will not share the defense of her African empire with the Axis but did emphasize that the situation in Indo-China where military bases were given to Japan was "something special" and does not apply to Africa or other parts of the empire.

The Paris press meantime continued its violent attacks on President Roosevelt, Welles and Admiral William D. Leahy, the United States ambassador to Vichy.

The Nazi-dominated newspapers asserted that a final German victory "cannot be doubted" and that France as a European power must align herself fully with the Axis powers.

U. S. Industrial Transition To Cause Problem, Henderson Says.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(P)—Temporary unemployment of 2,000,000 persons was forecast today by Leon Henderson, chief of the Office of Price Administration, as a possible development in the transition of American industry from peace-time to defense production.

Testifying before the House Banking Committee on behalf of the administration's price-control bill, Henderson declared the nation was going to have to "pay dearly" for lack of planning and for underestimates of certain defense needs.

Shortages of raw materials for civilian needs are beginning to develop, he said, and plant closings are going to result because of judgments which had to be made 18 months ago and which he conceded had been short of the mark.

He said, however, he thought that unemployment would be largely temporary because the workers ultimately would be absorbed in defense production.

Surprise Move 4 More Polio By Spain on Cases Reported Morocco Seen In City, County

London Hears All Leaves for Officers, Soldiers Cancelled.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(UP)—

Speculation on a possible surprise Spanish move southward upon French Morocco rose tonight when reports reached London that the leaves of all Spanish army officers and soldiers in Spanish Morocco have been cancelled since midnight Tuesday.

Certain quarters said there was reason to believe that Spain, having taken over full control of the Tanger International Zone following the collapse of France, might now move into French Morocco, which is under the military supervision of General Maxime Weygand.

ATLANTA, GA., AUGUST 9, 1941.

Death on the Highway

Georgia's deaths in automobile accidents on her highways were 401, as of July 10, 1941, as compared with 337 one year ago on July 10, 1940.

The death rate is up almost 20 per cent.

The accident rate is somewhat higher.

Almost complete absence of the highway patrol from the highways and the apparent collapse of that patrol as an efficient guardian and regulator of highway traffic must be held responsible for the increase in deaths and accidents.

It is submitted that travel has increased.

The answer to this would be that the highway patrol should have been augmented and its efficiency increased as travel increased.

The facts are that the state administration has chosen between human life and the loss of a few chickens and cattle. The choice was in favor of the latter commodities. The highway patrol officially has been ordered to give its attention to chicken and cattle thieves. This, it must be assumed, is it doing. It is not doing a good job on the highways.

The highway patrol was the one thing which escaped with a minimum of criticism during the Rivers administration. A few had, of course, objected to it. It was not possible to "fix" an arrest by the patrol. The courtesy cards now in existence did not then exist. Even so, the critics were few. The highway patrol had earned the respect and admiration of the state. It now has lost it.

It is not too much to ask that the patrol be released from cow and chicken duty and permitted to give at least some slight attention to the protection of human life.

Communists writers tell of sinkings of craft of less than 100 tons, which we supposed anyone with sporting blood would throw back.

Little Sympathy for Bruno

War has at last come home to Mussolini. His second son, 22-year-old Bruno, has perished in the wreck of a bomber. It was a new ship, this four-motored plane in which young Mussolini met death. Bruno was testing it, coming in for a landing, when it crashed near the airport of San Giusto at Pisa. Two others of the crew were killed also, and five were injured.

If Bruno took off from Rome in a plane and hurried to Pisa when the news came. Crews at the field where the crash occurred were drawn up in mournful review as Bruno hurried past into the hospital where he viewed Bruno's body. Later, Bruno's mother flew to Pisa. And soon after the crash, the Rome radio announced Bruno's "glorious death at his post of combat." Condolences began to pour in from many sides.

It is doubtful that the condolences, the fine words about "glorious death" at a post of combat will mean anything at all to Mussolini, the father who sent his son to death. For this is the father who spouted so much about the "dangerous life" and the glory of battle. This is the father who never cared at all how many other fathers and mothers lost sons. It mattered not to Mussolini that humble parents raised their boys to be his cannon fodder. Now, Mussolini knows those parents' feelings, if he has any feeling left at this stage of his murderous game.

As for Bruno, it is hard to work up sympathy. This was the lad who took delight in bombing helpless tribesmen in Ethiopia. This was the lad who wrote that it was "beautiful" the way a bomb opened "like a rose" as it exploded upon a group of helpless human beings. This was the "hero" son Mussolini lost.

Showing Results

For many years many factors in the south have been at work, seeking to impress upon the people of this region the untold wealth they possess in their forest lands. Educators, newspaper editors, state officials, federal agencies and others have preached month after month and year after year, the importance of forest conservation and forest protection.

It is gratifying to learn, therefore, that the vast amount of educational work done is, today, showing tangible results. The southern states, it is declared, are at long last taking proper steps to perpetuate their forests and are, at last, fully awake to the fact that, in these forests, they have a source of steady income amounting to at least half a billion dollars a year.

Chief enemies of the forests are fires and indiscriminate cutting.

Fires are caused, chiefly, by carelessness of smokers, of picnickers and of hunters. Yet, each year, the proportion of those who carelessly toss away lighted cigarettes, who do not properly quench picnic fires before leaving them, is growing less.

There are, in some of the more backward sections of the south, owners of timber who still cling to the mistaken theory that "burning over," induces greater growth of grass. Gradually these are being taught the error and today the loss from such fires is far less than it was just a few years ago.

Alabama, it is stated, has done most of any state to halt the evil of indiscriminate cutting. Recently a state policy was established there against cutting any trees less than eight inches in diameter. By observing such a rule, the best timber only is cut, while the smaller trees are left to propagate the land.

The improvement in forest conservation conditions illustrates forcefully the truth that the only real cure for any evil is that of education. It is a slow process, but it provides the only sure pathway to success in any worthwhile undertaking.

Repressive laws are, usually, futile. It is the nature of man to resent and to seek to obviate laws which he considers interference with his rights. It is only by educating the average man in the knowledge of the wisdom of such programs that he can be led to voluntary and willing compliance with rules and customs designed for the greater good of the whole.

Education is a slow process, but it is the process by which, someday, we shall reach Utopia in all public affairs. The success of the forestry forces through education should provide encouragement to those in other fields.

For all advancement made in forest conservation is due solely to education. Someday government itself will approach perfection, but only when the people who control government through their votes are sufficiently educated to recognize the worthy servant from the demagogue, to distinguish between truth and falsehood, prejudice and honesty, between true worth and shoddy imitation.

Georgia Editors Say:

SOUTH GEORGIA IS PINE COUNTRY

(From The Albany Herald)

When you observe a tract of planted pine trees where the land might not be suitable for field or orchard crops, you are brought face to face with an important problem and its eventual logical solution. The pine-planted area may be only a few acres in extent, but it is a symbol of a sort of new thinking on what the future holds for important southern industries—naval stores, lumber and pulpwood in particular.

Naval stores producers who own their lands see a great opportunity to build for the future by planting young pines for a much thicker growth than is available for present normal operation. Under average conditions several hundred acres must be covered for a 10,000-box "crop." Where planted trees have been brought into production, it is possible to work a crop on much less than a hundred acres. One operator in east Georgia who planted pines a number of years ago reports that he gets a crop from less than 50 acres. That, of course, materially reduces the cost of production.

Pines grow so rapidly in south Georgia, and their value is so certain to increase from year to year, that it is a safe adventure for any landowner to give some of his holdings a chance to grow pines—slash pines, yellow pines, short-leaf pines, depending on what the planter has in mind. Any competent forester is prepared to give advice on these points.

What tree lovers who remember this section long-leaf yellow pine forest of virgin growth can never forget is their beauty. They were magnificent trees, great sizes, and it is almost tragic that so few of these stands remain. It took several hundred years for nature to grow these trees, and the fact that they made a grade of lumber whose excellence was known to builders everywhere doomed them to the extinction which has been their fate. They are gone, but not forgotten.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

CONTRARY TO PUBLIC OPINION WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A major schism in the Republican party is foreshadowed by the latest statement from former President Hoover, former Governor Alf M. Landon, 1936 G. O. P. standard-bearer; John L. Lewis, of CIO fame, and a dozen other eminent Republican leaders, denouncing the various steps taken by President Roosevelt to strengthen national defense.

The Hoover statement is being roundly condemned in Washington as an attempt to make a political issue out of the nation's foreign policy. Not even the Republicans in congress like it, excepting those of the isolationist bloc, of course.

The fact that none of the leaders signing the denunciation holds an elective office, either as a governor of a state or a member of congress, caused all the more resentment to be expressed. Nevertheless, they were undertaking to speak for the Republican party in committing it to a course of action contrary to the overwhelming sentiment of the country as revealed in every test of congress and in the unmistakable evidence of every reliable poll of national opinion.

Back of it all, many observers see a challenge to the position of leadership held in the party by Wendell L. Willkie, past Republican presidential candidate, who is strongly supporting the administration, both in its efforts to strengthen national defense and in aid to the British.

WILLKIE HOLDS THE REINS Mr. Willkie has shown anything but a disposition to give up the reins of G. O. P. leadership, dropped into his hands by the Philadelphia convention last year. He is still ambitious as regards the presidency. The Hoover-Landon contingent never did like him. They looked on him as something of an interloper, a former Democrat, who broke up their playhouse by capturing first, the imagination of the convention, and then the nomination.

So long as Mr. Willkie remains the spearhead of Republican forces supporting the administration's foreign policy, there is little more than a second-fiddle role left for the Hoover-Landon-Lewis group on that score. Their only hope of challenging the Willkie leadership is to undermine him by making the Republican party the party of isolation. Not all of their motives are above suspicion.

One of the principal points of attack made by the Republican leaders is in the fact that Great Britain and Soviet Russia have now formed a military alliance and that the Roosevelt administration is committed to give the Russians aid against German aggression the same as Britain.

By some weird process of reasoning, all of this raises doubt in the minds of Mr. Hoover and his associates that the war is a clear-cut issue of liberty and democracy. "It is not purely a world conflict between tyranny and freedom," the former president's statement said. "The Anglo-Russian alliance has dissipated that illusion. In so far as this is a war of power-politics, the American people want no part in it."

Fighting with her back to the wall and given every support, short of war, by us to see that she does stand, Great Britain is thus criticized for an act of self-preservation which led her to sign a military alliance with the last remaining continental power in Europe. She was prompted all the more to do it by the knowledge that, once Russia is beaten down, Hitler's next move calls for invasion of England.

A JUSTIFIABLE ALLIANCE If the British have found an ally capable of checking the aggression of the two countries have a clash of economic philosophies? The inference of the Hoover criticism is that economic ideals should dissuade the British from joining with the Communistic Russian regime for their common military good, even if refusing to join meant the possible destruction of the British Empire.

If there is any "power-politics" involved in the alliance, as Mr. Hoover says, then there is also much good sense.

The one compelling motive behind the enormous defense expenditures voted by congress was the protection of this country against the uncertain future aggression of Hitler. Back of this, necessarily, is the desire to see Hitler defeated. It would relieve us of further stupendous outlays for ships and guns and men. We have been thinking not only of our sympathy for the British, but our own protection.

What does it matter, then, how Hitler's defeat is accomplished?

It does not mean that the American or the British people are any more enamored of Communism than before the German invasion of Russia started. That has been made clear by both Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt. It is merely that all three countries have found themselves traveling on the same road against the common enemy. If there had been more collaboration of the same kind by the whole of Europe a few years ago, the present world conflict might have been avoided.

A lot of other complaints in a similar vein were made by the Republican leaders against the administration's foreign policy.

But aside from the schism it all foreshadows for control of the G. O. P. in the next presidential campaign, none of it is of great significance. Many of those signing the statement, including Mr. Hoover, have opposed much of the administration's foreign policy program from the start, even the lease-lend legislation.

Problems

Are Never Solved.

Most of us, who possess any faith whatsoever, know that the final outcome of the present world struggle will see the forces of freedom and decency triumphant over the evil nations which would plunge world back into slavery. We know this is true, because if it were not all the things worthwhile for which mankind has struggled through the ages would be proven false. There would be no hope, no Divine Father, no trust in the dignity and the immortality of the soul of man.

Victory for the Axis powers would be a victory for material brutality over the unseen truths of the spirit and we know such outcome is impossible so long as God and Right is Right and Truth remains Truth.

However, after the victory is won, the world will be faced with tremendous problems and we are worried as to how we are to meet those problems. What to do with Germany and the Germans, for instance, after they have been conquered. We must devise some means to prevent them, for all time to come, from again plunging the world into these recurrent baths of blood. How to do it? Shall we make the Germans slaves? Shall we place the yokes of servitude upon a whole nation? Shall be taken from them the final freedom and keep them forever subservient? It almost looks as though we must. Yet we know that we cannot do this, that there is a limit of decency beyond which our own conscience will not let us go.

Yet, somehow, we must teach Germany a lesson she can never forget, a lesson that will forever make her a recent member of the family of nations, instead of an unbearable, intolerable symbol of the brutality of force.

There will be other problems. What to do about the smaller nations, those who have been crushed under the Nazi juggernaut? What to do about the transplanted populations? What to do about our own social problems, the form of our own government and our own social order for the future?

I think the answer to all these puzzling things we see ahead lies in the history of past fears and of past problems. That answer is that problems are never solved—they simply become outmoded, slip into the past and are displaced by new problems. And thus humankind advances.

Now We Tackle That Problem.

You see, the problem of chattel slavery was replaced by the problem of economic slavery. And, during the past 10 or 20 years, we have been slowly solving that problem through our new awakening to the rights of every man or woman to what we call social security. To realize that the workers must receive the profits of their toil and that he must know that decent living, decent hours for recreation, decent chance for education, are assured to him for as long as he shall live. We didn't solve the problem of chattel slavery. We merely replaced it with a new problem. And we shall not solve the problem of economic slavery. We'll replace it with a new problem.

We shall not solve the problems of the post-war world. We'll just discover they have faded into unimportance as new problems come.

And thus, slow, step by step, mankind progresses—by finding the problems of yesterday outmoded by the problems of tomorrow.

Now we tackle that problem.

Midnight Train, Travelers and Military Police.

It is rarely the witching hour of midnight finds me gallivanting around the night spots. I have been convinced, after all these years, that Confucius or Solomon or maybe it was Uncle Jeems Peavy, was right when he penned that immortal line about early to bed and early to rise—et cetera.

I shall not bring up the equally famous adage about the early bird and the worm—because I have no fancy for worms, in peaches or otherwise. The robins can have them—great, long 10-inch worms which put up considerable resistance as Mr. Redbreast gets a good hold and drags them out of the damp soil beneath the lawn.

But circumstances required a few nights ago that I stay up to meet the midnight streamliner from Chicago. It was scheduled for 11:38, railroad time, but that didn't make me less sleepy. It was 12:18 by my clock.

I had thought the Union station would be as deserted as an open air forum when the orator started passing the hat around.

But it wasn't. The waiting room was full of travelers.

I had thought the railroads were not carrying passengers any more. I had gained the impression that the buses and air lines and private automobiles had grabbed all the human traffic. I learned different.

Some of the waiters in the waiting room were waiting for friends from Chicago or somewhere west. It developed later that many of them were "seeing folks off," friends bound for Florida and prepared to sit up all night on the new type cars and save Pullman fares and extra charges. I was interested in one young female in a white suit or dress—let's just call it an "outfit," who had three ardent admirers at her beck and call and all trying to hold hands. And she had only two hands.

Mixing Pot

That streamliner—and I assume others on other lines—certainly is toting the loads. Passengers from the west climbed off like bees out of a hive. Passengers bound southward piled on.

A passenger station is a fine example of the mixing pot.

This strong contained all kinds. Fat and slim, clean and soiled. Waiting for the gate to the tracks to open, when folk got closer together, one began to believe those advertisements about b. o. contained considerable truth.

Fellow I was sorry for was a non-com in uniform, with M. P. on his sleeve. Military police. Because of his weary job.

Just now, with so many soldiers traveling—going on leave or returning—the Army keeps an M. P. in railway and bus stations to look after the selectees, many of whom are country lads unused to travel and likely to take the wrong train or bus—or go to sleep on a bench and miss out entirely.

I watched two of the military police at a bus station last week, looking tenderly after a youngster who had evidently discovered the liquor stores were running. He wasn't boisterous. Quite the reverse. He was very, very sleepy. He didn't quite remember where he was going. He was not enthusiastic about going anywhere. But the M. P.s jolted him along, nad checked on his ticket and got him safely on board. They were youngsters, too, but they knew their stuff. And they had far more patience than the average city cop would have shown.

Boys Who 'Bail Out'

Atlanta is to be host Thursday to the whole battalion of parachute troops from Fort Benning.

Yes, it's a movie stunt—press agent stuff. But that need not mean the folks here shouldn't do all they can to see the visitors have a good time.

From all I hear, they're a fine lot. Picked outfit. Not many can make the grade. Most enthusiastic acquaintance of theirs I know is Burgess Meredith, the actor who helped stage a radio broadcast describing the way the boys tumbled out of their plane and floated down to earth. He couldn't say too much for them—in his broadcast and in conversation in Atlanta afterward.

The movie producers—RKO-Radio—is putting up, as I understand it, for the expenses of the outfit—special train, a dinner and a dance and all that. It can afford it. No Hollywood outfit gets a chance often to use 500 extras without paying them $7.50 per day per each. Army men can't accept pay.

So Atlanta is to have another "world premiere." This time, "Parachute Battalion," Thursday night at the Fox. With all the 500 jumpers who helped make it seeing the picture and perhaps nudging a neighbor with an elbow and saying, "That's me coming down! I wonder if my girl in Memphis will recognize me?"

Nothing new about parachutes—except using them to drop armed troops inside enemy territory,

German, Red Losses Placed At 3,500,000

Vichy Says Russian Casualties 500,000 Above Nazis.

VICHY, Unoccupied France, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Military observers in Vichy estimated today that the Germans have lost 1,500,000 men and the Russians 2,000,000 men on the eastern front.

The aggregate casualties thus far—on the 48th day of the war—were described here as having already made the campaign the bloodiest in history.

Because of the desperate nature of the fighting, these observers added, relatively few prisoners are being taken by either side.

Losses, it was said, are running as high as 70,000 daily.

In the battle of Smolensk alone, Nazi losses were placed at 5,000 a day just in men killed.

As to losses in material, experts here described them as fantastic, offering this approximate tabulation:

The Germans—7,500 tanks; 5,800 guns; 5,000 planes.

The Russians—9,000 tanks; 7,250 guns; 7,300 planes.

As to compensating production, neutral informants here expressed the opinion that German "actors" are producing about 1,800 planes a month out of a top potential of more than 2,500.

While Russian production is a great secret, it is believed here that the Soviet is producing as many first-line combat planes as are the Germans, although perhaps fewer training craft.

Vichy's estimates of casualties was thus between the Russian and German extremes:

Men Lost

Source German Unstated 4,000,000 Berlin 1,500,000 600,000 Moscow 1,500,000 2,000,000 Vichy 1,500,000 2,000,000

Thus, Vichy's estimate agreed with Moscow's as to German losses, but more than tripled Moscow's acknowledgement of its own losses.

Vinson Seeks Repeal Navy Overtime Pay Law

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Laws requiring overtime pay for departmental employees of the Navy Department and Coast Guard would be repealed under a bill introduced by Representative Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, yesterday.

So Atlanta is to have another "world premiere." This time, "Parachute Battalion," Thursday night at the Fox. With all the 500 jumpers who helped make it seeing the picture and perhaps nudging a neighbor with an elbow and saying, "That's me coming down! I wonder if my girl in Memphis will recognize me?"

Nothing new about parachutes—except using them to drop armed troops inside enemy territory,

COMPARES GENE WITH THE SAVIOR

Editor, Constitution: On July 13 I wrote you to discontinue the paper. I have changed my mind. It is so interesting to read some parts of it just to see how far your paper will go in misrepresenting the Governor's work.

I noted July 31 in the "Pulse of the People," Mr. Blanton's letter after criticizing the Governor the last few words was the truth, to-wit: "Georgia will attend to this man Talmadge in 1942." They sure will and watch the ballot box a little closer in the future. The Governor's friends, also his enemies, know he has never been defeated. He was crucified like our Lord, and our Lord went higher afterwards. So did Gene Talmadge. Keep your good work up with your paper. I don't think anything is helping him any more. The common working people put him where he is; we are going to put him wherever he wants to go.

A WHEELER FAN WRITES

Editor Constitution: Westbrook Pegler is right: the American people have undoubtedly "gone nuts" again! But to prove that we are once more undergoing one of those periods of mania and mass hysteria which have occurred so often in the past, a "backward glance over the last two and a half decades" is not really necessary. One has only to glance back at the first issue of The Constitution, same issue, and review the leading headlines:

"U. S. Pledges All Practical Aid, Speedy Delivery, to Russians," says one.

"Free Peoples Can Win," assures another; and the story continues: "Secretary Hull predicted today that if the 'free peoples' work together . . . they will be victorious over forces of savagery and barbarism."

And all this, mind you, in the name of The Four Freedoms throughout the world, and with the approval and consent of such as those local zealots and maniacs who ganged up to stiffen our basic freedoms—right here in Atlanta!

"Keep your shirt on," cautions Pegler, "my advice would be to keep it also, or else that, too, may pass to the great democracies of Great Britain, China and the Red Russian Empire, together with your raw materials your weapons of defense and your hard-earned tax monies! Yes, brothers and sisters, keep your shirts on, and be 'durn' sure they are buttoned tight!"

Billion Increase in Tax Bill Asked of Senate by Treasury

Broadening of Base To Cover Millions Now Exempt Suggested; Reduction of Personal Exemptions Urged.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Treasury officials, declaring that the house-approved $3,200,000 tax bill was inadequate, submitted to the senate finance committee today recommendations for raising $800,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 in the income tax base to cover millions of persons now exempt.

The recommendations, submitted by Secretary Morgenthau, included:

1. Reduce personal exemptions. The official submitted a schedule based on $1,500 for married persons and $750 for single persons, as against present exemptions of $2,000 and $800.

2. Revise excess profits levies to reach earnings of many corporations now exempt.

3. Require joint returns for husband and wife, but provide special relief when both work outside the home.

4. Reduce the "depletion allowances" granted to concerns engaged in extracting such natural resources as oil.

5. Abolish tax exemptions on state and local bonds.

6. Increase estate and gift taxes.

Morgenthau and John L. Sullivan, assistant secretary of the treasury, promised to supply more detailed recommendations later.

SUGGESTED FORM.

Meanwhile, they suggested that congress simplify the returns which would be required of millions of citizens who would pay income taxes for the first time under the recommendations.

They submitted a sample form containing a table by which the taxpayers could tell at a glance how much tax he owed. He would be required merely to set forth his salary, other income, the total and the tax to be paid on the basis of the table, after taking an allowance for any dependents and an amount for deductions.

"Some have criticized this bill as severe," Sullivan told the committee, "but our present national peril requires many sacrifices."

The severity of this bill is minor when compared to the severity of other sacrifices which are cheerfully made by our citizens.

Miss Littlefield, who formerly had her dancing stockings made, especially in Paris, believes dancing will petition the nylon manufacturers to increase their output.

Off the ballroom floor she wears lisse mesh hose.

Speaking for the business women, Investment Counsellor Mrs. William Hamill says she'd be glad to wear cotton or another substitute, adding:

"When cotton begins to appear, you'll hear girls say 'everybody's wearing cotton stockings; I must get some right away!'

PA-YAS-YOU-GO URGED. Sullivan estimated that expenditures for the current fiscal year would be $22,169,000,000, with receipts of $9,402,000,000, exclusive of the pending legislation.

Some time ago the Treasury advocated that the government operate on a one-third borrowing and two-thirds "pay-as-you-go" system. To achieve such a goal, Sullivan said, it would be necessary to increase the house tax bill by more than $2,000,000,000.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, of the senate committee, remarked that during a conference in April the secretary had said that it was "doubtful" what would happen to the public credit if the Treasury could not attain a two-thirds to one-third ratio between revenue and spending.

Sullivan renewed the Treasury's recommendation, left out of the house bill, that surtaxes on individual income start at 11 percent instead of the 5 per cent provided by the house.

The assistant secretary urged the change "because of the importance of curbing the present inflationary tendency and because of the revenue it would produce."

Elaborating on Morgenthau's proposal for revision of excess profits levies, Sullivan contended that the house-approved system of permitting corporations to figure excess profits either on the basis of average earnings or invested capital enabled many companies to obtain exemptions which were "entirely unwarranted." He urged a computation of excess profits based on invested capital.

COLLECTION C. HIGH.

Sullivan renewed the Treasury's recommendation for increases in gasoline, tobacco and beer taxes, but he asked elimination of a "use tax" of $5 per year on automobiles which were voted by the house.

The latter tax, he said, would involve an administrative cost of $6 for each $100 collected, or more than five times the average expense of collecting other levies.

"The proposed tax," he declared, "has no relationship to the extent of use or the value of the object taxed and, therefore, is unusually inequitable. It taxes a $5,000 town car exactly the same as the fifth-hand car worth only $20."

Adoption of the Treasury's suggestion for lowered income exemptions, he added, would mean that virtually every automobile owner would pay a direct tax because single persons receiving as little as $14.63 per week would be subject to the income levy.

Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, asked Morgenthau at one point whether expenditures due to the defense program is going to work," the secretary replied, "the figure should be nearer $25,000,000,000 than $22,000,000."

Asked for his opinion as to a general sales tax, Morgenthau replied that "that is the last thing I would recommend."

CAMP MEETING.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WOODSTOCK, Ga., Aug. 8.—(UPI)—Smirly dressed women, leaders in the city's society, business and professional life, are ready to abandon the silk stocking standard.

In fact, they agree to gladly sponsor a cotton or other substitute style so that the nation's dwindling supply of silk might go entirely to the Army and Navy for parachutes and powder bags.

"I shouldn't mind wearing cotton stockings at all; why, I used to wear them when I was a girl," declares Mrs. Harry Lippincott Cassard, long noted for her beautiful grooming.

The grandmother of Debutante Sally Cassard, she recalls wearing cotton stockings as a youngster to match her dresses while the fashion experts have been trying to get us to do recently."

The colored cottons "were very pretty, and quite expensive," she said.

Wilburn said the company had reduced its bid to about $211,000 and plans called for work to start.

RAISING CHILDREN. COLUMBIA, S. C., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The state highway department received an application for a driver's license from a woman in which she listed her occupation as "raising children."

WELL, WELL! SANDERSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 8.—(UPI)—Mrs. Bob Cobb, of Warthen, went to the well to help the aluminum collection campaign. When she had the well cleaned, she found eight aluminum dippers had been dropped into the well. They were promptly turned over to the collection committee.

COASTAL HIGHWAY REPAIR TO BE STARTED MONDAY. HIGHWAY Board Chairman W. E. Wilburn said yesterday that a 56-mile project on the Coastal Highway between the Florida state line and Darien probably would be started Monday.

The widening and resurfacing of the highway, one of the most heavily traveled roads in the state, has been in progress for the last two weeks, will be brought to a close Sunday evening.

The evangelists for the meeting are Dr. C. H. Babcock and the Rev. C. E. Shaw. The Rev. L. A. Harvey is in charge of the music. Children's services have been conducted by Mrs. Ruth Kelly Argos.

THE GREAT GARBO RETURNS IN "MATA HARI" AT RHODES. THE GRAND old beautiful woman spy story, with Greta Garbo in the title role, is at the Rhodes for the week. The title is "Mata Hari," and it is the more or less true story of the woman who served the Germans in the first World War.

It is a different Garbo from the Garbo we see in newer films—the mysterious, alluring, silent Garbo who always wanted to be alone. And usually was.

Ramon Novarro, popular favorite of the old days, is the leading man, and Lionel Barrymore is the "heavy." The picture is well worth seeing again.

SUNNY SPARKLES WITH MUSIC, DANCING. LIGHT music and superb dancing feature the gay but dragging musical comedy, "Sunny," which is currently playing at the Paramount theater, with a Mardi Gras and circus background.

It is a distinct improvement on the other American-made musicals.

Silk Hosiery Deadline Set Up To 3 Months

Mixed Yarn' Stockings To Lengthen Present Scarcity.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(UPI)

Chivalrous defense officials today came to the rescue of ladies who have been getting panicky about the silk stocking situation.

Just when it appeared that silk hosiery manufacturers would have to halt production three to six weeks hence for want of silk, the OPM and Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply arranged with the industry to continue production of silk hose for perhaps three months.

This will be accomplished by mixing other yarn with silk now at hand at mills. The net result—according to assurances given the defense agencies by the silk industry—will be a stocking identical in appearance with present hosiery.

PA' STIRBLING, Young's Widow Settle Estate

CONSENT DECREE DIVIDES FIGHTER'S PROPERTY AFTER 8-YEAR WRANGLE.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 8.—(UPI)

Eight years' litigation over the estate of W. L. (Young) Stirling, heavyweight boxer, has ended here with a consent decree dividing the holdings between the fighter's father and manager, Pa Stirling, and his widow.

The widow, Mrs. Clara Kinney Stirling, had brought suit in superior court for accounting of the estate of which she was executrix. The boxer died in October, 1933, of injuries received when a motorcycle he rode collided with an automobile.

The decree, signed by Judge Malcolm D. Jones, gives Mrs. Stirling a house and two vacant lots in Macon, where the boxer lived; 148 acres of farm land at Ochlocknee, half-interest in a 103-acre farm at Ochlocknee, a lot at Sea Island, Ga., 2 1/2 acre lot at Ochlocknee, two lots in Miami, Fla., and seven shares of stock in the Bank of Ochlocknee. She also received half of all funds from accounts receivable.

Pa Stirling received a house and lot in Miami, 980 acres of farm land in Thomas county, Georgia, 25 shares of stock in the Bank of Ochlocknee, a stock or bond in the Beneficial Loan Society of $500 par value and a contract with A. R. Stirling.

McCLESKY CLAN TO HOLD REUNION

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WOODSTOCK, Ga., Aug. 8.—

Descendants of Thadious Henderson, pioneers who came to Cobb county from Hall county more than a century ago, will meet August 31 for their annual reunion. The place selected for the meeting is the home of Samuel David McCleskey, grandson of the above and youngest son of the late Samuel Rhea McCleskey and Caroline Babie. He lives in Cherokee county near Little River campground two miles east of Woodstock on the Alabama road.

A basket dinner will be served about 12:30 o'clock and an appropriate program is being arranged for 11 o'clock.

"Your unfit-to-wear silk hosiery," said the ad, "can be made into very useful ammunition bags and other articles necessary for national defense."

Defense officials, asserting they have heard of the old hose collection plan, conceded that such stocking would have "definite" use if they could be collected, unraveled and then rewound for use in powder bags which disintegrate on the explosion of big guns.

Film Offerings Are Pleasant Entertainment

Gaiety, Drama, Mystery and Heroism Are Featured.

By DUDLEY GLASS.

While there is nothing on Atlanta screens that would make me cut short a vacation at the beach and hurry home, there is plenty of pleasant entertainment.

For bold and he-man heroism I recommend "Manpower," at the Fox. "Whistling in the Dark," at Low's Grand, is full of crime and comedy.

The Rialto offers a pleasing story called "Angels With Broken Wings" with a large cast, including several new girls who may climb. "Mata Hari," starring Greta Garbo, has proven herself to be in British-made films and insist on making a flight, gay young girl out of her.

The story concerns show people, a show girl in particular, and the wealthy other side of civilization.

Anna Neagle is the star of the circus who falls in love with a millionaire who kisses her in a crowd during a Mardi Gras celebration. She is about to marry him when the circus comes to the wedding and breaks up all plans when they thought they were just entertaining the guests.

Ray Bolger does some excellent dancing and Miss Neagle does some dances with him. Bolger, you may remember as the scarecrow of the "Wizard of Oz." You will want to see him more often.

The Secret of the Marshbanks.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Cherry Meets Her New Employer; Settles Into the Daily Routine

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters. Charlotte Cherry, Rawlings, an orphan since she was seven years old, has been at Saint Dorothea's school for girls, the kind of almost nothing about her past history that has finally caused her to realize that like the other girls at the school she has no family and she questions nothing about her mother's other's name. She develops into a very attractive girl and has a flair for writing the name of an Indian chief's daughter, having appeared in one of her own plays. The Judge, Andrew Marshbank, her aunt, with Emma Haskell, a trainee nurse, appears to arrange for her to remain in the school. She remembers that momma must have her hair dyed blonde and when Marshbank tells her that momma has gotten her a secretarial position, she is very pleased. Mrs. Porteous Porter, in San Francisco, where momma now resides, Cherry expresses more about herself and her family. She is to go first to the Marshbank home. With the judge as Fran's young wife and his niece Amy are dining outside. On their way out, Fran and Cherry feels ill at ease in her comment clothes. On their way out, Fran and Amy stop and only casually when Cherry is introduced to an old woman. Cherry that Fran and Coates are indeed mother and father. As Fran and Amy leave she hear laughing reference to her and her clothes.

INSTALLMENT VI. A knock at the door made her turn in quick alarm toward the room. Molly, the nice-looking little maid, came in and delivered to Cherry a message as she expertly replaced towels and turned down

The judge sent you up the magazines, Miss Rawlings, and says he was sorry not to say good night, and will you please have breakfast with him at half past eight. And May is to go downtown with you at ten, if that wasn't too early for you. And am I to call you?"

Cherry, confused, agreed to everything with a bashful thank you and a good night, and when the maid was gone took herself seriously in hand, brushed her hair vigorously, enjoyed a luxurious bath with every accessory in the way of salts and powders and scents that the bathroom afforded, got herself comfortable in bed and turned magazine pages for an absorbed hour.

But when the lights were out she fell to thinking again, and the humiliation and pain of her arrival at the Marshbanks mansion slowly came back, detail upon detail. She wished she need never get up in the morning and face hem all again, in her rumpled school uniform and black cotton stockings. Even the maids in this house wore silk stockings. And Amy had looked as if she had come out of a box filled with tissue paper and set upon her little silver slippers like an exquisite doll, too frail to be touched.

Fran, Cherry's thoughts ran on, had seemed ugly at first, but when you watched the expressions of her face for a moment, and heard her voice she did not seem ugly any more. Much more than Amy she seemed the sort of person an artist would like to paint.

And he was an artist, of course—that man with the tremendous laugh and the tremendous voice, so sure of himself, as he folded his arms and entered into conversation with the judge, so more than sure of himself when he lowered his tones, and when a half-smile twitched at his mouth, and when he exchanged careless smiling words with Fran, while her nervous, thin fingers played with the folds of her handkerchief.

To have a man like that, at least know that one was alive! To have him obliged—forced to admire one for something, for anything. To call him by his name and have him smile when one unexpectedly encountered him.

It was of Kelley Coates that she was thinking as she dropped off at last into exhausted sleep.

The re-encounter with her old friend Emma and the introduction to her new home and to her new employer proved much less of a strain than Cherry had feared they would. Her brief visit at Judge Marshbanks' house had somewhat prepared her for elegance and luxury. Emma was exactly as she remembered her, unresponsive and quiet and capable, and old Mrs. Porteous Porter was so completely absorbed in herself that Cherry in her presence could feel as unself-conscious as one of the trays, vases, lamps, jars, framed photographs, gift books and statuettes with which the old lady's room was crowded.

Mrs. Porter was a stout, soft, pretty woman of 74. Some physical difficulty, perhaps not more serious than her weight itself, made it inconvenient for her to walk more than a few steps at a time. She took a drive every day, she could get to the bathroom for the comfort of a long, leisurely bath, and every morning she moved to her favorite chair in a sunny bay window or beside an old-fashioned fire. Otherwise she hardly stirred at all, busying herself with needlework, letters, newspapers, telephone in the mornings, returning from an hour, and filled with flowers, were used year after year.

Its old mistress loved her magnificent home and felt something like reverence for it. Nothing in it must be changed. Perhaps three times a year, when the little elevator had lowered her immense bulk to the parlor floor, she tottered from room to room, satisfying herself that all was as it had ever been. Ten years after the end of the War Between the States this home had been built; it had been the wonder, the glory of the hill city then. Henry T. Glashell had built "way out on Jackson street," most as far as Tuckertown. "There was one fellow that believed San Francisco was going to grow and prosper, you see," the admiring voices all about him had said. The Glashell mansion had been pointing out to visitors for 30 years as a visible sign of the city's wealth and progress.

It was a wooden house much bay-windowed and balustraded with imposing columns flanking the front doors, a carriage drive sweeping along the western side to a porte-cochere, calla lilies and fuchsias and shiny-leaved laurels banking its rising lawns and views from all the northeastern windows—in rooms never used by anybody—of the city, the Presidio, Tamalpais, Alcatraz and Angel islands, Bunker, the gardener, and Fairfowl, the butler, and the man who came to wind the clocks, and the man who came to take the jewelry away and brighten it, and the cleaner, who called daily.

Cherry soon found that she had plenty to do, like the cook in the kitchen, and the two maids who kept everything downstairs in order, and Keno who arranged the flowers in all the unused as well as the used rooms, and Al, who swept steps and driveway and sidewalk, and Merryweather, who drove the car, and Frank, who drove on Merryweather's day off, and Bunker, the gardener, and Fairfowl, the butler, and the man who came to wind the clocks, and the man who came to take the jewelry away and brighten it, and the cleaner, who called daily.

Cherry had only to be quietly helpful in every direction that her imagination and willingness could discover to make a place for herself almost instantly. She looked well in her new brown cloth dress with its gold buttons; she was a young, pleasant element in the dreary old house. And yet she wasn't the pretty, lightheaded type who'd be getting married as soon as one got used to her, the old lady reflected. She could take dictation, she wrote a square, neat, legible hand, and she had a nice voice when she read aloud. Altogether, Emma's protege promised well.

Cherry began her duties with the trembling feeling that by no chance could her lines have fallen permanently in such pleasant places. To be able to creep away from the world that in one brief encounter had hurt her so terribly and to hide herself here with a lovely room for herself, a houseful of books for company, amazing meals served at regular—or indeed, irregular—hours, and only a gentle, sweet, helpless old lady to amuse seemed too good a fortune to be true.

Atlantian Flying Giant Bombers Across Ocean

Richard Pursell Wants, However, To Fly Them in Raids.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Every time Lieutenant Richard Pursell, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, reads in the Halifax papers about Berlin getting a good shelling by his brethren of the RAF, he says to himself: "Well, the old girl did her stuff like she was supposed to do."

The "old girl" in these cases being one of the many American bombers, the famed flying fortresses, which Lieutenant Pursell and his fellow Americans have been flying across the Atlantic to do their stuff for England.

"There's a big kick in knowing that the ships we've flown are doing their job," the lieutenant said. "But it would be still more fun to be flying them on raids yourself."

Acting as a flying ferryman, the young Atlantian, who lived at 488 Ashby street here before he joined the Canadians, is no particular fun.

"You take off about sunset, climb to about 24,000, slip on your oxygen mask and sit there comfortably in the darkness about 10 hours. Then you drop down and there's Iceland, and that's about all there is to it."

What Lieutenant Pursell would really like to do is join the Eagle Squadron flying in England. He opines maybe that's why they haven't let him fly a ship straight across to Scotland yet. They think he wouldn't come back.

However, he still has hopes of getting over there. He hopes his kid brother, David Eugene, makes it, too. He brought the youngster down to Sergeant Cecil Mayes, the recruiting officer, yesterday, and got him signed up in the United States Air Force. He hopes some day there'll be two Pursells flying the north Atlantic.

The lieutenant is a fine figure of a man in his dove-gray gabardine uniform with the polished black boots. The only trouble is, around here nobody ever recognizes him as a flyer for the RCAF. They think he is a highway patrolman.

FLYER AND FLEDGLING—Lieutenant Richard Pursell (center), once of Atlanta, now of Halifax, N. S., and the Royal Canadian Air Force, ferries flying fortresses to Iceland for transfer to Britain. His brother, David Eugene Pursell (right), thinks he'd like to fly, too. So the lieutenant, on leave for a while at his home on Ashby street here, took David Eugene down to Sergeant Cecil Mayes (left), in charge of United States Army recruiting in the new Post Office building, and got him signed up to fly for Uncle Sam. When he learns, maybe he can do the job his brother is doing now.

Tanker Blast Destroys Huge Gasoline Cargo

2 of 17 Persons Aboard Canadian Vessel Missing.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—(P)—The Transiter, 180-foot all-steel tanker of the Transit Tankers and Terminals, Ltd., Montreal, with 15,000 barrels of gasoline aboard, exploded and burst into flames tonight on River Rouge.

The ship docked here last night and loaded the gasoline today at the docks of the Joy Oil Company. Detroit detectives investigating the explosion said there were 17 persons aboard, all Canadians, and that all had been accounted for except two.

Eight injured crewmen were taken to the Delray General Hospital.

Bernard Couture, member of the crew, said: "It was just after dinner when it exploded. I was standing in the middle of the ship. All of a sudden there was an explosion and a big flame in the middle of the ship. Then things happened so fast none of us knew what was going on."

Leon Henderson Draws Dies' Fire

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(P)—While Leon Henderson was advocating the administration's price-control bill today before a congressional committee as a weapon of democracy, he was denounced on the house floor by Representative Dies, Texas, as having been a member of "five Communist-controlled organizations."

"I wouldn't put him in charge of dog catchers," Dies shouted. "The time has come to speak frankly."

Dies did not mention Henderson by name on the house floor, merely saying he was referring to a man who was about to be placed in charge of all price-fixing. Off the floor, however, he told newsmen he meant Henderson, who is head of the Office of Price Administration.

Shadburn - Evans Rites Take Place At Baptist Church

Miss Grace Shadburn, daughter of Mrs. Olivia Puckett Shadburn and the late Joseph Olin Shadburn, became the bride of Hayden W. Evans, son of Mrs. Annie Lee Foster and the late Dr. Nathaniel A. Evans at an impressive ceremony taking place last evening at the Edgewood Baptist church.

Rev. A. B. Couch performed the marriage at 8 o'clock. A musical program was presented by Mrs. Lavert Mitchell, soloist, and Miss Mary Lee Barlowe, organist. Floor baskets filled with white lilies and gladioli were placed against a background of palms to form the decorations for the church. Cathedral candelabra which held lighted white tapers, flanked the floral arrangements.

The groomsmen were Julius B. Avery, Roy S. Boozier and Paul L. Shadburn. Ben G. Harper acted as best man for Mr. Evans.

Miss Helen Shadburn, who was her sister's maid of honor, was becomingly attired in an ice blue satin dress and she carried a bouquet of pink roses, asters and lilies tied with pink and blue ribbons.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. Roy S. Boozier and Miss Gladys Shadburn, the bride's sisters, were gowned like the maid of honor and their flowers were similar. Patsy Gunter, the bride's cousin, who was the flower girl, wore ice blue net posed over taffeta. Robert D. Hartley, the ring bearer, carried the ring in a white lily.

Olin Benton Shadburn gave his sister in marriage. Her radiant beauty was further enhanced by her gown of ivory satin fashioned with a bouffant skirt and snug-fitting bodice, which featured a sweetheart neckline. Her veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a white satin prayer book showered with orchids and swansons.

After the ceremony Mrs. Shadburn entertained at a reception at her home on Elmira place. She received her guests wearing a black crepe dress trimmed with sequins. A spray of gardenias graced her shoulder. Mrs. Louise Cofer, the groom's sister, wore a green starched chiffon model and a shoulder cluster of gardenias.

Miss Louise Ward and Mrs. Olin Benton Shadburn kept the bride's book. A lace cloth covered the bride's table, which was decorated with bowls of white gladioli.

Mr. Evans and his bride left for a wedding trip to Florida and after September 1 they will reside at 929 Euclid avenue, N. E. Mrs. Evans donned for traveling a burnt sugar brown dress trimmed with natural mink and worn with brown accessories.

For Etiquette and Expense Consult the Wedding Booklet

At last the great day arrives, you and your fiance are bride and groom. Will the wedding be flawlessly perfect? It will, if you've settled those puzzling little questions of etiquette and expense well in advance.

Q. What expense does the bride's family pay?

A. The trousseau and wedding outfit, naturally. They send out invitations and announcements, too. And as hosts they pay the expenses of the church and reception—music, decorations, sexton's fee, refreshments.

Q. What are the groom's expenses?

A. The ring, license, clergymen's fee and honeymoon. He also may buy the bride her bouquet and present corsages to both mothers.

Q. What is the correct dress for the booklet?

A. Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, HOW TO PLAN YOUR WEDDING, to Home Institute, care of The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Woman's Quiz

Q. How may I remove paint from leather?

A. Mix five parts by volume of 36 per cent silicate of soda (water glass), one part of 40 per cent soda ly and one part 22 per cent ammonia. Apply this mixture to the painted leather, using a fiber brush or swab of cotton waste attached to a stick, and, as soon as the coating is disturbed, wash off with lukewarm water. It will do no harm if by any chance the liquid is allowed to remain until it has dried, because as soon as the surface is sponged with water the old paint is readily removed with a scrubbing brush.

A Balanced Diet Can Abet Reducing

By Ida Jean Kain.

Sometimes I have to marvel at how hard it is to sell women the idea of controlling their weight the easy way—just by eating intelligently. The other noon as I lunched with a smart career woman who is so thin she worries me, I couldn't resist giving her bread and butter plate a little shove in her direction. Well, you'd have thought it was horse meat.

"I am off that stuff," she informed me with prompt finality. "It's fattening." And there was an accusative gleam in her eye as she added the query, "Do you write that column on slimming and that eat bread and butter?"

Of course I do. Bread and butter have their place in a balanced menu. Besides, they are good food. It has been my observation that the people plagued with weight trouble, whether fat or thin, are the ones with pronounced food idiosyncrasies—peculiarities, preferences, and phobias. They eat too much or too little and the wrong things.

If the angular girls would see that their meals measure up to the nutritional yardstick, and the fat girls would do the same with the calories scaled down, both could attain normal weight without having to do anything unusual.

It might be a very good plan for anyone whose weight varies from the normal to keep a diet diary with the list of essential foods pasted in the front for reference. Here I go again with the list of the protective foods! You need daily, regardless of your weight: One pint of milk, skimmed for the fat girl, and reinforced with cream for the thin one; one egg, boiled or poached for the underweight; two fresh vegetables, one a green leafy; a green salad, two fresh fruits, one a citrus fruit or tomato juice; whole grain or enriched bread and butter.

You could not possibly get so many calories in that list of protective foods that you would be fat. On that kind of diet, you would look better and feel better.

Fat or thin, or with a tendency in either direction, it would pay you to look into this matter of balancing your menus. If your menus are balanced as to the protective foods and the calories are adjusted to your needs, your vitality is safeguarded and your weight practically takes care of itself.

Co-Ed at Boys' College Has Decided Advantage Over Home-Town Girl

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I am 16 and am in love with a boy 23. I have been going with him for two years. He tells me that he loves me and tells several of my friends that I am the nicest girl he knows. He has always been nice to me. He lives a few miles from me, but is away at school now. He wrote me one letter and I answered it. I have not heard from him, except through other people. I go with other boys, but do not love anyone but him. I have never told him I loved him, but he seemed to know it. All of his friends are nice to me. One of them went to the school to see him recently and tells me he is in love with a girl who goes to the same school. Since he has not been home in some time, I think that maybe he is in love. I have never been jealous. I know I am too young to think of marriage now, but I think he is that for me and I would like to marry when I have finished school. Do you think I have any chance of holding him? ANXIOUS.

Being on the spot helps a lot to promote romance, so maybe this girl, being there at school with him, has won him, for the time being. Men often fall in love with the girl who happens to be around or in the same office, so do not lose all hope. I think he must like you, or he would not have said such nice things about you. Don't write him, however; just let him make the next move, which he will do if he wants to. I think that when he comes home from school and you see him again, you will have an opportunity of deciding whether he still loves you. Don't worry too much about the other girl. Maybe he is just enjoying her company because he is away from you.

FLATTERY MAY CHANGE BOY'S ATTITUDE.

Dear Dixie: I am 19. I have been in love with a certain boy for a long time. Some time ago he went away, but has been back since he left. There is another girl who is very much in love with him. He is wonderful to both of us, but the last time he was here, he did not even say hello to me. I do not know why, nor do I know his reason for doing me like that. Dixie, I am sure I love him and always will. He says he loves me, but how am I to know? It seems to me he loves the other girl. I really think she has spoiled him by doing everything he says and catering to him. He has nothing to lose.

NOTHING TO LOSE.

Dear Dixie: Last August I met a boy who is very attractive. I had several friendly chats with him during the months that followed, but he did not ask me for a date until four months ago. I have been going with him ever since. He has broken a date with me three times, but always comes back and apologizes. He goes with other girls and does not object to me going with other boys. He does not come to see me often, but it is not because he cannot, for he only lives three miles from my home. I have not seen him in three weeks. I like him very much and he tells me he likes me very much. Do you think he does? He has told other people he likes me. I am only 14. I am not thinking of this matter seriously, but if you were me, would you keep on going with him or stop now? As I have already told you, I think a lot of him and always have a good time when I am with him. Do you think he wants to go with me?

WONDERING GIRL.

If you enjoy being with this boy well enough to have him break dates with you just anything, then continue to go with him. Yes, I think he likes you. He, no doubt, wants to date you and the other girls as well so, if you think that going with him is worth having him break dates anytime, then it is up to you. The fact that he always comes back and apologizes is something in his favor. It stands to reason that he is at least interested in you. I think it is nice that you take the attitude you do and I also think that you are very smart not to take him too seriously. I think I would continue to go with him. If you have fun with him, and enjoy being with the other girl, I really think she has spoiled him by doing everything he says and catering to him.

FLATTERING MAY CHANGE BOY'S ATTITUDE.

Dear Dixie: I am 19. I have been in love with a certain boy for a long time. Some time ago he went away, but has been back since he left. There is another girl who is very much in love with him. ### MY DAY: Reader Asks Why Inequality Exists

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Thursday.—Yesterday was a particularly pleasant and uneventful day. A friend came with her little daughter to lunch, and we swam and sat about in the sun for a while.

In the evening I read aloud Mr. David Cushman Coyle's little book, "America." He has gathered together in brief form many of the arguments which most of us find convincing today in our outlook on world and domestic affairs. I think this short recapitulation will prove of value to schools and colleges as well as individual readers.

A letter has just come to me which I want to quote and answer in this column: "Referring to a recent 'My Day' article the following is your statement: 'In the United States there are many areas where children cannot get to school and besides there are many families who have no clothes for their children.' For more than eight years your husband has been the directing head of the United States and his announced policy on taking office was the 'forgotten man.'

"With the information you must have on the matter I have quoted, I would be pleased to have your explanation as to why such conditions continue to exist in the United States.

"Your explanation, I think, should have the same amount of publicity as your original statement."

The answer seems to me fairly simple. This administration has put on the statute books a great deal of social legislation. Much of it was passed in opposition to the desires of many people, who honestly believed that conditions would return to what they once were and that it is a mistake to try to find new ways to adjust to new conditions. Experience alone can prove whether plans undertaken can have permanent value or not.

Some of them have already been in operation long enough to prove themselves. Others are in process of trial. The social security program as a whole, housing, WPA and NYA have all been factors in meeting the needs of what my correspondent calls the "forgotten man."

To wipe out, however, all injustices and inequalities in our democracy, to make in a period of 12 years a decent corner of the world for everyone to live in, the face of world conditions such as have existed, is beyond the hope of even the most sanguine. We can only be grateful for the fact that more people are aware of the problems of forgotten children, as well as forgotten men and women, and that we are working together to make our corner of the world a better place for all of us to live.

To finish off a college costume there are colorful rubber boots such as these: Left, a cowboy style that fits over saddles and moccasins. It comes in scarlet and white, elk and brown, black and white. Right, a versatile model that extends almost to the knees but is jauntier worn rolled down so that the plaid lining shows.—Associated Press photo.

Stanwyck Battles As Female Doctor

By Harold Heffernan.

"A broken finger." "Since when does a man have to strip to the waist for a broken comedy hit in 'You Belong to Me'?"

The gentlemen over at Columbia studio (and of course they could be prejudiced) say the new film will be even funnier than "The Lady Eve." A daring statement, but nevertheless "You Belong to Me" has all the earmarks of solid, continuous fun. We've never seen anything funnier to watch in the making.

Fundamentally, it's a powerful laugh idea. Barbara is an efficient physician, and a darned pretty one, whose patients include most of the handsomest men in town. She's married to Henry Fonda—and Mr. Fonda is the most jealous creature on earth. So, there you are. Let's look in turn at today's happenings:

The scene opens with Dr. Stanwyck in her best professional mood. She has a handsome male specimen on the table. He is Gordon Jones, former U. C. L. A. crack tackle.

Just outside, Fonda is peeking through a keyhole. When he sees Jones stripped to the waist and his own wife fluttering about, he straightens up, clutching and unclenching his fists. This is too much. Then, when he hears his wife laughing, Fonda crashes through the door, sprawling on the floor.

Looking up, Fonda sees Jones on the table, stripped to the waist. "What's wrong with you?" the irate husband demands.

Rita Hayworth was having trouble with her makeup the day we dropped in to see "You'll Never Get Rich," in which she's appearing with Fred Astaire.

As she powdered her nose at a mirror on the set, Garry Owen, a tough-looking fellow who plays gangster roles, stood by.

Rita scowled at her face in the mirror. Then she scowled in turn at the puff and the powder box.

Too Many Vitamins Call For No Worry

By Dr. William Brady.

Not for several years now have we heard even a rumor of any appreciable ill effect from "overdose" of vitamins. Five years ago some highly colored yarns were in circulation via the gossip route (not in scientific medical literature) and many old-timers in practice rather eagerly accepted these bits of propaganda as a convenient excuse for their own ineptitude in applying the newer knowledge of nutrition in general practice.

A typical story, which I have always suspected was conceived and propagated by commercial interests, was that some young mother misunderstood the doctor's instructions and gave her baby a daily ration of a teaspoonful of an irradiated ergosterol (synthetic vitamin D in oil), believing it to be a kind of cod liver oil. Cod liver oil would contain perhaps 300 units of vitamin D in the teaspoonful of an irradiated ergosterol in oil contains perhaps 12,000 units, or 250 units in a drop. The story, handed vite, the whisper from room to person, not in scientific medical literature, was that the infant later succumbed to an unusual form of pneumonia and postmortem investigation disclosed deposits of calcium in the lungs and other organs. One of the reasons why sunshine vitamin D is required for healthy growth and development of infants, children and youths is that it is essential for the utilization of calcium and phosphorus in the body.

I repeat, there is no scientific evidence that there is any such thing as an "overdose" of vitamins in any circumstance. Of course one might take more of one or more vitamins in some concentrated form than may be necessary to maintain vita (better than ordinary functional condition). One might even take more than may be needed to correct or cure a health impairment or nutritional disease due to insufficient intake of vitamins. But in the sense of doing any harm an "overdose" of vitamins is virtually inconceivable. I make this assertion only after a more than ordinary survey and study of the scientific literature of the subject over a period of several years, and in the assurance that it cannot be successfully controverted.

There is an important lesson to be drawn from this, and I hope there is. It is this: If you take vitamins at all for any ailment or functional weakness, remember that a little is not enough and what some old fogey doctor may believe "too much" may be necessary to bring satisfactory results.

Grant Meets Sabin; Kovacs Plays McNeill

Don Defeats Talbert, While Frank Whips Schroeder.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(UP)—National Champion Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Frank Kovacs, ranked third nationally, won their way into the semi-final round of the eastern grass court tennis championships today.

Tomorrow McNeill and Kovacs meet in one semifinal and Wayne Sabin, Reno, Nev., and Bryan Grant, Atlanta, meet in the other.

McNeill advanced with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Billy Talbert, of Cincinnati. Top-seeded, McNeill spotted Talbert a 3-1 game lead before his superior stroking discouraged the Ohioan in the first set.

Kovacs defeated Ted Schroeder, Glendale, Cal., 6-2, 7-5. It took the latter a while to warm up, Kovacs taking the first five games. Schroeder played some fine tennis in the second set, but he had neither the length nor service to match the Oaklander.

Mrs. Sarah Cooke defeated

Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, 6-2,

6-3, to qualify for a place in the women's final, where she will meet Pauline Betz, of Winter Park, Fla. Miss Betz defeated Dodo Bundy, Santa Monica, Cal., 6-0, 6-3, 6-6.

Joe Wood Sees Son Turn in No-Hitter

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 8.—(UPI)—Thirty years ago "Smoky Joe" Wood smoked a baseball past the St. Louis Browns for a no-hitter, 5-to-0 shutout for the Boston Red Sox in the American League.

Last night he sat in the stands and watched his son duplicate that feat for the Scranton Miners against the Albany Senators in the class A Eastern League.

It was like father-like son as Joe Wood, Jr., graduated from Yale University two months ago, set the Senators down without a hit to give his mates a 5-to-0 triumph.

BY JACK TROY

It Was Too Much A pro once took a look at Harry Paschal's golf swing and fainted dead away. I find it a bit difficult to describe myself.

Let's see. Well, his stance is a lot like Marshall Mauldin's at the plate when a sidearm curve-ball pitcher is working for the opposition.

Paschal chokes his club, stands well away from the ball, half stoops and reaches out to hit it.

Golfers have looked at his stance and address and offered him any reasonable wager—before he swung. Afterwards, they have gone home and burned all the books on How To Play Golf. They were pretty burned up, too.

Paschal unfailingly hits the ball well. I don't understand it. You CAN'T stand like he does, choke up a club like a punch hitter and get the results he does. You simply cannot do it. But Harry Paschal does. He even shoots in the middle eighties.

Sometimes, when he's "stepping in the bucket," he doesn't shoot in the middle eighties. But he never scores badly.

Mr. Capus Brewer and I would like to preserve Mr. Paschal's swing for posterity. In fact, a full-length movie of Mr. Paschal in action would serve as the greatest incentive for duffers NOT to lose heart. We'll have to see Mr. George Sargent about taking a movie. We'll keep the smelling salts handy in case he should weaken.

And while we're about it I want some good analyst to tell me how it is C. B. Brewer is such a fine guard on the North Fulton football team. I would like to know, after watching the old man play golf, where he gets his athletic heritage.

Old Capus isn't an unorthodox golfer—he's just unorthodox.

Unusual Shot While on the subject of golf, I think it's only fair that I should tell you about a shot I made at East Lake.

It isn't often I get to brag about a shot, and, besides, it saved a dime. The fact that it brought catcalls from Messrs. Brewer and Paschal and cries of "lucky!" from youthful railbirds is neither here nor there. They might be prejudiced.

A veteran caddy assured me that, while a lot of plain and fancy shots had been made on East Lake No. 1, there never had been another like mine.

We were playing the third hole which is bordered by the concrete road, and I pushed a tee shot on a dead line for the well-kept lawn of one of the homes on the other side of the road, mistaking it, of course, for the green.

The youngsters gathered at the fence already had staged one of the season's first scrimmages in retrieving another ball and spied the flight of mine gleefully. It was a certain "o. b."

But their joy was soon to change to sadness.

We knew something unexpected had happened when they began yelling and pointing to the fairway. We had heard a thud as if the ball had struck something made of tin.

Actually the ball hit a guy wire on the other side of the road and rebounded into the middle of the fairway. Like a hole in one, it wouldn't happen once in 60,000 shots.

"You'll have to mention that in your writeup," said the kid who would have earned a dime if the ball had kept going where it was supposed to go. I promised him I would.

Leads in 'Weeping' When Harry Mehre, Ole Miss coach, was here the other day it was suggested that Alabama apparently has been hardest hit in unexpected player losses.

"At least," Mehre responded, "Tommy (Frank Thomas) has been doing the finest job of weeping."

Ole Miss already has lost three guards to Uncle Sam, but still has Hovius, Hapes, Popp, Jackie Flack, et al. If September doesn't bring any further player losses, the Rebels will merit a high conference ranking.

All coaches are keeping their fingers crossed. With the season's initial practice three weeks away, rosters remain fairly intact. The draft has not affected the collegiate ranks appreciably.

If this continues to hold true, it should be a sensational season in the south. There are many teams with good prospects. I found Captain Ray Graves, of Tennessee, pondering over the season's opener with Furman. Dizzy McLeod has his best material in 10 years.

"They've got everything to gain," Graves pointed out. "We play Duke in the following game."

Furman slipped up on Georgia not so many years ago. However, there is hardly a remote chance that Tennessee will not have the hatches battened down when the Purple Hurricane sweeps into Knoxville on September 20. It will be John Barnhill's first game as head coach.

Joins the Colors Ted Mann, who has been head of public relations for the Duke athletic department these 14 years, soon leaves for active duty in the Naval Reserves. Ted writes:

Dear Jack:

As I prepare to report for active duty in the Naval Reserve, I would like to write you a note to thank you for the fine co-operation you have given me in the 14 years I have been director of sports publicity at Duke University.

It has been a pleasure to work with you and I am sure that you will give my successor, Add Penfield, the same splendid co-operation you gave me. Any help you can give him will be appreciated. He is a fine boy, a hard worker, and he gave up a fine position to return to Duke and fill in for me.

Again thanking you for your co-operation with me, As ever, GLENN E. (TED) MANN.

Conn Back--'Hollywood Okay'

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 8.—(UPI)—Heavyweight Boxer Billy Conn returned home today from a brief whirl as a Hollywood actor and was equally reticent about two things:

His opinion of Hollywood and the prospects of meeting his father-in-law.

Asked how he had liked Hollywood, Billy studiously avoided the superlatives and gave out with a laconic: "It's okay."

Pressed for further details, he enlarged on his first attempt by one word to make it:

"It's just okay."

With Billy was his bride, the former Mary Louise Smith, daughter of James J. Smith, ex-big league ball player. Smith once threatened to "punch" Billy if he married Mary Louise.

Billy said he didn't know when he would meet his father-in-law, adding that he thought Smith was in Ocean City.

Tyack's Homer In 10th Inning Takes 1st Game

Both Scores Are 3-2; 3d Game Slated This Afternoon.

By JACK TROY.

Constitution Sports Editor.

On two plays, a wild pitch and a wild throw, the league leading Crackers last night dropped a double-header to the tail end Little Rock Travelers by the same score 3 to 2.

The double loss didn't particularly damage the Crackers, and it certainly helped Bert Niehoff's cellar dwellers. They picked up two full games on Memphis.

In the first game, which went 10 innings, the Crackers were leading 2 to 1, going into the ninth. Dependable Connie Ryan had to make a quick throw off balance on a ball hit by Mahan and he threw wild into the Cracker dugout. The Peebles tied up the game on this play and won on Jim Tyack's home run in the 10th.

HURLS 5-HITTER.

Jim Prendergast gave up only five hits as he outlasted Baileid Chipman, seeking his 13th win. The Peebles collected 11 hits off Chipman.

The second game was as stalemate as late as the sixth inning when Professor Emile Lochbaum, who apparently had worked out of trouble, made a wild pitch to give the Peebles a winning advantage with two out.

Canny Bert Niehoff took no chances in the seventh with Junior Marshall, who singled, on second base with two out. He sent Prendergast back into the game to relieve Randy Gumpert and pitch to Charley Glock, a left-handed batsman. The strategy worked nicely enough. Glock grounded out.

SENSATIONAL PLAY.

A large ladies' night crowd was thrilled by a fancy first game fielding exhibition by Johnny Gerlach and Ryan. In spite of the fact that a wild throw lost the game, the Cracker infield played sensational.

The Crackers out-hit the Peebles, 9 to 8, in the second game, but they were not as steady afiel.

The third game of the Cracker-Peebles series is scheduled this afternoon with Floyd Strommen expected to face ex-Cracker Wayman Kerkisiek.

Here are the sad details of last night's double-jolt.

FIRST GAME.

With the aid of a Pebble miscue, plus timely hitting, the Crackers scored two runs in the first inning. Ryan walked after one was out and Marshall grounded out. Burge beat out an infield hit. Then Glock singled to left, scoring Ryan. Prendergast intercepted the return throw and threw wild to third, enabling Glock to score.

The Peebles scored in the third. Tyack beat out an infield hit, Dwyer walked and McBride singled to right, sending Tyack home.

The next three batters went out when Resinger made a sensational one-handed stab of his grass cutter, ending the game.

SECOND GAME.

The Crackers grabbed a one-run lead in the first inning when Mailho walked, moved up on a passed ball and scored on Burge's clutch single after two were out.

The Peebles scored a couple of runs to take the lead after two were out in the third. Mahan hit to Ryan, who threw wild to first on a difficult play and Schalk scored as the ball rolled into the Atlanta dugout.

Tyack untied the contest in the 10th when he connected with Chipman's first pitch and drove Ryan out. Mahan hit to Ryan, who threw wild to first on a difficult play and Schalk scored as the ball rolled into the Atlanta dugout.

In the Crackers' half, Crompton led off with a single and Gerlach laid down a perfect sacrifice.

However, Rambert flied to center and Richards, batting for Chipman, was thrown out when Resinger made a sensational one-handed stab of his grass cutter, ending the game.

Bill Leach Fires Ace at Piedmont

As far as Bill Leach is concerned, golf is an awful simple game instead of a simply awful game.

Bill ought to know. After playing for two months on Sundays only, he knocked in a 5-iron shot at Piedmont Park's second hole for 17 holes.

Horace played fine golf to stop Tom Clark, 4 and 3, playing eight holes of the front side in pars and having a pick-up before cutting loose on the back nine for a 2-under-par tally.

Ed Barnes scored an upset with his 3-and-2 victory over Colon Sappenberg, who gave Tommy Barnes his toughest battle in the recent state tourney. Barnes is a regular player at Capital City and is a tough opponent to handle, but he enters few meets.

GRIDDERS AID DODD.

With half the Tech football team and Coaches Bill Alexander and Mack Tharp in supporting roles, Dodd, the Tech backfield mentor, romped to a 4-and-3 triumph over Alfred Kennedy Jr.

Young Bobby Adair scored Ozmer too hot to handle and bowed, 5 and 3. Street with four birdies for an even par count, halted Gerard Allen, 4 and 3. Bright was up after bagging a 1-under-par score on the front side and beat Bud Bicknell, 4 and 3.

Now for that feature tilt between McGaughy, the former Georgia baseball star, and Dahlbender. They reached the turn all square, having "about 39's or 39's." McGaughy had a 2-over-par 37.

The 10th was halved in 5s. Dahlbender three-putted the 11th for a 5 as McGaughy went 1 up with a bogey 4. Dahlbender got it back at the 12th by hitting the green in two and using two putts for a birdie.

PUGGERT GETS HOT.

Then McGaughy's putter started burning his hands. Dahlbender made the green in three after shooting his tee shot far to the left of the 13th green. He was close to the

Leader Praises Plan To Train More Doctors

Move To Alleviate Shortage of Physicians Cited at Rally.

LOG CABIN CENTER, Ga., Aug. 8.—(P.) Plans to alleviate the shortage of physician in Georgia by enlarging the facilities of the State Medical School in Augusta were praised today by Dr. F. S. Belcher, of Savannah, president of the Negro State Medical Association.

Speaking to students attending a 10-day health institute sponsored by the Georgia State College, Dr. Belcher said, "We urge the Board of Regents, while making steps to improve and enlarge the medical service for white people in Georgia, to keep in mind the suffering of the Negroes."

Dr. Belcher added that "the need for medical service among Negroes is even greater than among whites."

The health institute is held each summer to emphasize better health to teachers and people of middle Georgia. Dr. Belcher is conducting the institute this year, assisted by local physicians.

Urging additional training for Negro physicians, Dr. Belcher cited declining service statistics which, he said, "uncovered many defects which might have been corrected had proper medical service been available."

Scientists To Hear Sermon on 'Spirit'

"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read tomorrow in First and Second Churches of Christ, Scientist, Atlanta.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (II Corinthians: 3:18).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit is the Ego which never dreams, but understands all things; which never errs, and is ever conscious; which never believes, but knows; which is never born and never dies. Spiritual man is the likeness of this Ego. Man is not God, but like a ray of light which comes from the sun, man, the outcome of God, reflects God" (p. 250).

Luther Holcomb Dies of Wound

MONROE, Ga., Aug. 8.—Funeral services were held Thursday from Corinth Christian church for Luther Holcomb, 21, who died of self-inflicted gunshot wounds at his home, near Malnutgrove, Wednesday. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

A native of Gwinnett county, Holcomb was the son of Wiley Holcomb and Cilla Clarke Holcomb.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Roberta Burnette Holcomb; one child; his parents; two brothers, Wiley Holcomb Jr. and Clyde Holcomb; six sisters, Misses Adel, Emma, Lottie, Lucile, Ethel Mae and Shirley Holcomb.

Dr. Belcher added that "the need for medical service among Negroes is even greater than among whites."
